We chose global warming as our topic as that was the on topic we both felt mattered to both of us.

We found the report from which we based the data and the facts from:

Early on our discussion we both wanted to do something interesting with scrolling.

In the end we had some design disagreements. We both compromised what we wanted for the sake of the other.

We knew designing for the smallest device first and branching out was the recommended approach. But neglected to do that in the early versions of the layout. Which was annoying because media queries are tedious enough, but having to redesign things from large devices to small definitely makes it more painstaking and tedious.

We did some fun things with javascript. We don't know if they improved the design, but they were fun. Eric did a transition effect and Bilal did some scrollbar shenanigans.
